Description

Hans Schwarzenbach, an organ builder who died around 1605/06, was a citizen and craftsman based in Füssen. He is credited with the construction of the organ for the Klosterkirche St. Mang in Füssen between 1595 and 1596. Apart from this notable project, his work is primarily known in the South Tyrol region. In 1605, Schwarzenbach played the organ built by Daniel Hayl at the inauguration of the Evangelical Holy Trinity Church in Kaufbeuren.

Description

The organ was constructed by Hans Schwarzenbach in 1599. Originally built as a 'swallow's nest' organ in 1509, it was moved to a gallery in 1609. In 1618, it underwent its first major overhaul. Additional repairs were carried out in 1670. Later, in 1690, the organ was transported over two trips from Eppan to Auer and placed in St. Peter's Church. In 1850, Karl Mauracher significantly modified it, removing the iron lever and adjusting the register knobs. Josef Sies made more considerable changes in 1870. The organ was restored by Johann Pirchner in Steinach in 1982.
