Description

The organ was constructed by Rudolf von Beckerath Orgelbau from Hamburg in 1978. According to Seggermann/Weidenbach, during the 1978 works, besides the case, old pipe material was also reused (originally from 1749 by Johann Diedrich Busch; Marcussen, Tolle). The console, stop mechanism, and wind chests were newly made at the time. Interestingly, Seggermann/Weidenbach mentions "stop mechanism" while also referring to the combined action. The playing aids also suggest an electric stop action. In 2011, three tongue registers were recreated. The organ uses a historical casing from Johann Dietrich Busch (Itzehoe) dating back to 1749.
