Description

The organ was completed on June 29, 1899, as indicated by the inscription on the largest Subbass 16' pipe: "Wandsen 1899 29/6". It was built by Mārtiņš Krēsliņš (Martin Kresling), an organ and harmonium builder from Jēkabpils. This organ is the 106th instrument produced in his workshop, as noted by the firm's trademark visible on the console.

There is no information about any subsequent work done on the instrument.

The organ remains in practically original condition, with M. Krēsliņš using kegellades in its construction. Currently, the organ is very dirty, which is causing several issues with the action and the tuning.
