Description

This organ, a mechanical cone-chest instrument, was originally built by E.F. Walcker and initially placed in the Bulduru Church. The inscriptions on the organ's casing from the A. Krans organ-building workshop in Riga indicate several tuning dates: July 15, 1937, July 21, 1939, June 21, 1940, and a repair and tuning on May 17, 1967, by a person named T. Veiklis. Furthermore, remnants from an older organ built by A. Martin include a console frame without keyboards, a pedal frame (C-c1) with some remaining keys, and two old wedge bellows measuring 257x128 cm. These components hint at a rich, albeit fragmented, history reflecting ongoing maintenance and changes over decades.
